"I hate you, Arnav Sehgal," Riya hissed.

"I know you do, Riya Malhotra," Arnav replied coolly. "But I don't care."

Riya's hands clenched into fists. She wanted to hit him, to hurt him, to make him feel the pain that he had caused her.

"You're a monster," she spat.

Arnav's eyes narrowed. "And you're a hypocrite," he retorted. "You claim to be so righteous, but you're no better than anyone else. You're just as selfish and ambitious as I am."

Riya's heart sank. She knew that he was right. She was no better than him. She was just as selfish and ambitious.

"I'm not a monster," she whispered.

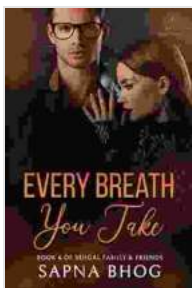

Arnav's expression softened slightly. "Then prove it," he said.

Riya took a deep breath. "I will," she said.
