The Motherhood Project was founded by playwright and actress Heidi Schreck. Schreck was inspired to create the project after she became a mother herself. She wanted to create a space where women could share their stories about motherhood, both the good and the bad. The project has since grown to include over 100 monologues from women all over the world.

The monologues in The Motherhood Project are as diverse as the women who wrote them. Some monologues are funny, while others are heartbreaking. Some are about the joys of motherhood, while others explore the challenges. But all of the monologues are honest and authentic, and they offer a unique glimpse into the lives of mothers.

The Motherhood Project has been praised by critics and audiences alike. The New York Times called it "a powerful and moving exploration of motherhood." The Washington Post said that "The Motherhood Project is a must-read for anyone who has ever been a mother, or who ever hopes to be." And NPR said that "The Motherhood Project is a celebration of the complexities and contradictions of motherhood."
